Practice Areas

Employment Law, Litigation

Alyssa Malinoski works in the employment law and litigation practice groups, defending employers in cases involving discrimination, harassment, retaliation, termination and wage-and-hour compliance and representing companies in business litigation.

Prior to joining the team at Delfino Madden, Alyssa practiced civil litigation in California's central valley, defending cases involving medical malpractice, premises liability, professional liability, personal injury and wrongful death. Alyssa has experience managing cases at all stages of litigation including pre-litigation case analysis, taking and defending depositions, written discovery, dispositive motions and dispute resolution.

Alyssa attended the University of the Pacific, McGeorge School of Law, where she graduated with distinction and honors and was elected to the Order of the Barristers for excellence in trial advocacy. Alyssa was also a member of McGeorge's nationally ranked mock trial team, where she qualified to compete among top teams in the country at the national finals. Throughout law school, Alyssa interned at the Sacramento County District Attorney's office and gained invaluable courtroom experience conducting a wide range of evidentiary hearings.

Alyssa applies her skills to vigorously advocate for her clients, working closely with them to develop practical strategies for an optimal outcome.

In her personal life, Alyssa can often be found exploring Sacramento's incredible local restaurants, wineries and craft breweries, as well as spending time outdoors.
